

A new information gateway to public health and social well-being

The NDPHS is launching its new website

Read also our press release about it

Founded in 2003 in Norway, the Northern Dimension Partnership in Public Health and Social Well-being (NDPHS) works to improve the quality of life and the demographic situation in Northern Europe, and foremost north-west Russia. As a part of a major international effort to achieve sustainable development, it tackles societal problems such as alcoholism, communicable diseases (HIV/AIDS) and disparities in access and promotion of health services and care.

13 governments and 8 intergovernmental organisations established the Partnership as a platform to (i) discuss and agree on priorities in policy making through increased cooperation in the spheres tackled by the NDPHS, and (ii) enhance coordination of international activities aimed at narrowing social and economic differences and improving human health and social well-being.

Today, launching its new website the NDPHS is proud to open a new gateway to information about public health and social well-being in Northern Europe.

You are invited to visit our website in English and Russian, and enjoy comprehensive information as well as a variety of useful tools and features presented with a user-friendly structure:

- Click for facts and figures on Partner Countries and Organisations;
- Download documents, policy recommendations and reports;
- Use an advanced search tool and find links to health and social well-being issues and actors;
- You may even submit your own news by using the website's open access tool.

New rich features such as a Project Pipeline and a Project Database will be added in the near future making our website a must-visit Internet place for those working with sustainable development issues.
